

The moving contact line on patterned surfaces

Xiao-Ping Wang

Numerical simulations of the moving contact line over the chemically patterned surfaces were carried out using a newly proposed model. These surface inhomogeneities lead to stick-slip motion of the contact line, the capillary wave of the interface. We also investigate the associated power-law behavior of the moving contact line dissipation as a function of the velocity.